TENDENCY OF EMIGRATION.

The recently published departmental report of the Commissioner of Crown Lands in Canada contains some facts which are not without interest for us in this Colony, not merely because they affect a sister dependency, but also because of their bearing on the opening up of our overland communication with the East. From this document we learn that the entire quantity of land sold in the Province during the last year amounted to 405,190 acres, while in 1861 it reached as high as 657,661 acres, showing a decrease of about 39 per cent. This falling off is accounted for by the monetary devaluation caused by the American war, the diminished means of purchase within the country, through the generally deficient harvest of 1862—but chiefly, in an official point of view, by the fact that the best Crown Land in both sections of the country, are already sold. In contrast to this we learn from the report of the Minister of Agriculture that a considerable increase in the immigration into the Province during the year 1862 has taken place, as compared with the previous year. In 1861 the number of immigrants remaining in Canada was 12,223, while last year it amounted to 17,200. Of these nearly seventy per cent. in each year is expected that the influx of population will be very much larger.

It will be evident at a glance from these few facts that at the present rate all the available government land in Canada well adapted for settlement will be exhausted in the course of a few years. While this is the case the immigration into the country seems rather to increase than lessen, and in all probability will continue to do so for some years. Many reasons will conduce to this. The old country will always have a surplus population, and during the present American troubles larger than usual. A large portion of this surplus will naturally tend to the nearest British dependency. Only those who have considerable means will be likely to go to Australia and the more distant provinces, while the war in the United States will have the effect of keeping away many that would otherwise have emigrated to that country. Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Canada will then stand in the foreground as fields of settlement for intending emigrants. But this emigration as we have seen from some of the above statistics, exhibits a decided tendency westward. What has happened in Canada in fact during the last two years is nothing more than what has been the case since America was first peopled by Europeans. Westward and ever westward the "Star of Empire" leads, and will until the broad continent is belted with population from ocean to ocean. Such being the case the projected wagon road connected with an overland telegraph line between Canada and British Columbia, announced some time ago in these columns, becomes every day more and more necessary. Until this road is constructed through the magnificent prairies of the North West or a portion of them, it will be next to impossible to throw open that country for the emigration which is tending that way. But this measure cannot be long delayed. The Home Government are fully alive to the importance of doing away the isolation in which these colonies west of the Rocky Mountains exist in regard to their sister colonies of the East. This they may do by providing some efficient governmental organization for Central British America, and by giving substantial encouragement to the construction of a line of communication between British Columbia and Canada. This done we might soon expect to see a very large portion of the emigration which has a tendency to towards the Western States, bending to the North West and filling up what is the British American counterpart of the prairie States of the West. Then we may expect to see that magnificent central country filled with a large and flourishing colony, for the millions of acres of fertile soil capable of growing all the productions common to Canada and the extreme Northern States, which the Saskatchewan contains, will not long want possessors and tillers when only a few weeks' voyage separates them from the overflowing population of the British Isles and the rest of the European continent. With the occupation of the centre of the continent by an industrial population, would come almost immediately a British line of trans continental railway, of which the first instalment has already been constructed in the splendid line of Canadian railways. We need not say what a step would do for this country. We know what effects they have produced in every country in which they have been introduced. All these advantages we should have, and more. Our situation as the first stepping-stone between the "East," between China, Japan and Europe, would enable these Colonies to build up a commerce equal to that of the proudest nations of any age. The Americans are and have been making gigantic efforts to span their territories with the iron wire. Whether they will yet accomplish it before Britain and her Colonies remains to be seen. All the latter require to do is to open up British America to settlers and trade by means of a good through road and a well organized Colonial Government. This we think the Imperial Government should look to, and the results we have mentioned will follow as a matter of course.

BRITISH COLONIST.

FRENCH VS. ENGLISH IRON.—A correspondent of the London Times states the alarming fact that iron plates of 4½ and 5 inches thick of French manufacture, lately tested at Portsmouth, have very far surpassed in resistance, powers any that have been produced in England. He considers it important that this fact should be proclaimed through the length and breadth of the land, inasmuch as our own workers in iron may be stimulated to recover and maintain the lost credit of England, the greatest iron-producing nation in the world; especially, since the fact has been ascertained and is now generally admitted, that ten minutes would suffice to burn or sink any wooden ship afloat, and that consequently, the "wooden walls" of Old England have become useless lumber.

SURPRISE.—"To the young, surprise is the most intolerable suffering. Active misery always brings with it its own power of endurance. What a common expression it is to hear, 'Well, if I had known what I had to go through before-hand I should never have believed it possible that I could have done it.' But it is a dreadful thing to be left alone with your imagination, to have to fancy the worst, and yet not know what is to come; and in this early youth has a degree of acute anguish that after years cannot know. As we advance in life, we find all things here to utterly worthless to grieve over them as we once would grieve, we grow cold and careless; the dust which to us were hastening has entered into our hearts.
